AIC Standing Rules

Guidelines for AIC Interim and Midterm Meetings
(approved by the members of the 2002-2005 and 2006-2009 AIC Executive Committees)

The regular member hosting the Interim or Midterm Meeting is responsible for planning and organizing all aspects of the meeting.

Important Facts to Know in Planning an Interim or Midterm Meeting

1. The use of the AIC name in association with a meeting is only allowed by the AIC after authorization by its Executive Committee (see the "Guidelines for the Use of the AIC Name and Symbol").

2. AIC Interim or Midterm Meetings must not conflict with any part of the AIC Statutes.

3. Midterm Meetings will take place two years after AIC Congresses. Interim Meetings will take place at intervals corresponding to one and three years after AIC Congresses. All Meetings shall be organized by regular members on a self-sustaining basis without incurring expense to the AIC.

4. AIC Interim Meetings may not take place in the same calendar year as an AIC Congress and must be separated from the nearest AIC Congress by at least six months, the exact dates being determined in consultation with the Executive Committee. In turn, AIC Midterm Meetings may not take place in the same calendar year as an AIC Interim Meeting and must be separated from them by at least six months, the exact dates being determined in consultation with the Executive Committee.

5. Interim and Midterm Meetings, like Congresses, should be truly international events. Invitations to attend and to contribute papers should be sent to all AIC members. When required, letters of invitation needed to get the visa should be sent to participants who request them. Less than half of the papers should normally come from authors from the country in which the meeting is being held.

6. The official languages of the AIC are English, French and German. However the hosting regular member is strongly urged to have English be the language of the Interim or Midterm Meeting, since it is a more universal language. If a presenter wishes to present a paper in one of the other AIC official languages or in the official language of the hosting country, then that presenter must provide audiovisuals that are direct English translations.

7. Economic arrangements are to be made that are most beneficial and attractive to all participants, especially having in mind those participants who cannot afford elevated costs. Thus, the registration fees should be kept as low as possible, and the venue of the meetings is to be selected so as to allow a wide number of lodging possibilities for all budgets, and varied transportation alternatives. Many potential participants at international conferences have to work to a strict budget, and it would be in their interest if the charges of the meeting are kept to a minimum. The organizing body should consider whether any of the costlier meeting activities (such as lunches, special dinner, etc.) could be optional.

Meeting Length

Interim and Midterm Meetings usually start on an evening with registration followed by a welcome party. The meeting program takes place on the following three days.

Committee Structure

It is highly recommended that the hosting regular member put a committee structure in place for organizing the meeting. Recommended committees to have in place are a Technical Program Committee, a Social Events Committee, a Fundraising Committee, a Finance Committee, a Publicity Committee, and a Publications Committee.

The Technical Program Committee is responsible for setting all aspects of the technical program of the meeting. This committee should issue the call for papers making sure that it adequately calls for papers that relate to the specific topic of the meeting. The call should ask for extended abstracts (for example 2 pages in length) so that the paper contains enough information that it can more accurately be refereed. Guidelines on exactly how this extended abstract is to be written, regarding format, font, font size, margins, etc., should be included in the call for papers. Members of the Technical Program Committee should be chosen from the hosting regular member as well as from other AIC members around the world. It is the responsibility of the Technical Program Committee to determine the acceptability of the submitted papers. A referee system should be put in place to decide which papers should be presented orally, which should be presented as posters, which should be modified, and which should be rejected. One good rule of thumb is; if the paper does not pertain to the topic of the meeting, it should be presented as a poster. After using that criterion, there may still be some papers that pertain to the topic, but may be weak in content. Such papers can be presented as posters, or the Technical Program Committee, time permitting, may wish to contact the author(s) and ask for submission of a more substantive (longer/stronger) abstract by a given deadline.

The Technical Program Committee is responsible for setting the schedule for the meeting. The oral papers be scheduled in such a way that there are no more than two parallel sessions. The posters should be up for at least one day, but there should be two scheduled author-present poster viewings in the program. Poster presentations can be called /listed as interactive presentations.

The Social Events Committee is responsible for planning the welcome party, programs for accompanying persons, and usually one dinner evening event during the 3-day meeting.

The Fundraising Committee seeks sponsorship for as many events as possible; breakfasts, lunches, welcome party, dinner, etc. As the fundraising becomes more successful, the financial burden on the regular member organization becomes less of a concern.

For the Midterm Meeting, it is highly recommended that sponsorship be sought for the AIC Judd Award and its recipient. A sum of money equivalent to US$ 2,000 will be provided for travel assistance; the winner would be a guest of the Midterm Meeting with registration fee waived. If the Award goes to a team of researchers, then the sum of US$ 2,000 is given to the individual who will travel to deliver the Judd lecture. Extra expenses like hotel should be sponsored by some outside source sought for by the hosting regular member.

The Finance Committee is responsible for setting the budget for the meeting. This committee must set the registration fee for the meeting being mindful of the fact that the registration fee must cover the cost of publication and mailing (if necessary) of the Proceedings. All committees must give cost estimates to the Finance Committee so that they can develop a sound budget based on expected revenues and expenditures. All receipts must go to the Finance Committee so that they can keep track of the money flow at all times.

The Publicity Committee is responsible for all aspects of publicizing the meeting including all press releases, the first circular, and the second circular. Much of this is done electronically and then printed copies are produced for worldwide distribution. The Publicity Committee usually develops the logo that will become the permanent signature for that AIC meeting. Often posters are made to publicize the meeting. The Publicity Committee is also responsible for establishing a website for the meeting. The extended abstracts can be posted on the website no earlier than one week prior to the meeting.

The Publications Committee is responsible for producing the Proceedings of the meeting. These Proceedings can be issued at the time of registration for the meeting. Or these Proceedings can be sent to all participants no later than 6 months after the meeting. If the Proceedings will be issued after the meeting, then at registration for the meeting, all participants must receive a program book containing the meeting schedule and the abstracts. The regular member is responsible for all costs associated with production of the Proceedings and/or program book. The cost to produce the Proceedings should be included in the registration fee after being broken down on a per person basis. Authors should be sent guidelines for writing their papers for the Proceedings by this committee. This committee can refer to the "Guidelines for the Publication of AIC Proceedings", when sending instructions to authors.

Suggested Timelines

All times should be interpreted as prior to the meeting date.

If Proceedings will not be handed out at registration, Program Book with abstracts and schedule published: 1 month
Abstracts published on the website: 1 week
Deadline for submission of full paper for Proceedings: 1.5 months for Proceedings published and handed out to registrants at the meeting or 3 weeks for Proceedings to be published and mailed to registrants after the meeting

Responsibilities After the Meeting

1. Publish Proceedings no later than 6 months after the meeting, if they were not handed out at the meeting.
2. Send a report summarizing the meeting to the AIC Executive Committee within 6 months of the end of the meeting. The report should include information about the meeting such as number of participants, countries represented, total number of oral, poster and commercial exhibitors, and other matters of interest.
3. For the Midterm Meeting, the citation for the AIC Judd Award and the Judd lecture should be published in appropriate international color journals in addition to being published in the Proceedings.
4. The Publications Committee should assign someone to prepare a brief summary of the presented papers emphasizing their highlights. This should be published in appropriate international color journals.
